

Jerusalem newspaper, 2017

TAKE COVER

A worker puts on the final touches to Avner Sher's 'Alternative Topography' art installation and sukkah yesterday at the Tower of David Museum, which will open for the third Jerusalem Biennale for Contemporary Jewish Art tomorrow. Overlooking the new city from within the Old City walls, the sukkah is 120 square meters and over five meters high, made out of cork with old maps of the Old City of Jerusalem burnt into the material. Inside the sukkah there are additional pieces of art that have been made for the Biennale. The exhibition closes November 15. (Marc Israel Sellem/The Jerusalem Post)